DRILL, DRESS PARADE AND REVIEW AT VAN CORTLANDT PARK.

THE MEN RECEIVE INSTRUCTION IN EXTENDED AND CLOSE ORDER-INSPECTED BY GEN-

ERAL FITZGERALD-TWO RUNAWAYS. I wonder if there is any one left in New-York?" asked a youngster as he looked at the great crowd that stood around the parade ground at Van Cort-landt Park yesterday. "Them that didn't come will be sorry when they hears what they missed," his companion answered, and there was certainly more truth than grammar in what he said.

The 7th Regiment has had many opportunities to show itself worthy of the admiration of the citizens of New-York, but the command probably never oked better and its admirers never had more reason to feel proud of its soldiers than yesterday, when under a smiling sky, on a perfect parade ground, surrounded by thousands of men and women, it gave an exhibition, not only inspiring but beautiful, and demonstrated that perfection in the science of arms lies within the grasp of the citizen-soldier.

It was a day of practice and instruction, orders for which had been issued by Colonel Appleton some time ago. The crowds at the armory early yesterday morning showed how deeply the public was inter-ested in the work of the regiment. The men began to arrive at the armory early, all in heavy marching rder, with black leggings, knapsacks, rolled overcoats, white helmets and one day's rations, and when assembly was sounded at 9:30 upward of 900 men fell into line. The guard, commanded by Captain Wil-iam H. Palmer, preceded the regiment, and at 9:50. to the music of Sousa's last march, the regiment, under command of Colonel Appleton, marched from the armory to the Grand Central Station by way of Sixty-sixth-st., Fifth-ave. and Forty-second-st. The ist Battalion, consisting of Companies C. G. F. K and H. was commanded by Major James C. Abrams, and H. was commanded by Major James C. Abrams, and the 2d Battalion, consisting of Companies E. I. D. A and B. was under command of Major Augustus W. Conever. All along the line the fine marching of the men called forth choers and applause from the people who had come from all parts of the city to see pecial train of two sections carried the regiment to Van Cortlandt Park, where hundreds of people awaited its coming. The lawn in front of the old manorhouse, the parade ground and the heights overlooking the plain were thickly dotted with in-versited spectators when the white-heimeted men moved in solid mass from the station, and then demonstrated that it was not a pleasure excursion by breaking into companies and proceeding to the work to which they had been assigned. "We are here," an officer explained, "to do such work in the of drill as cannot be done in our armories," way of drin as cannot be done in our armeries, least about military matters when they saw the various companies, each independent of the other, drill in the extended order. The spectators had only a few minutes' time to note the movements of the ops when an incident happened which might have had serious consequences.

A RUNAWAY CAUSES EXCITEMENT. Immediately after Colonel Appleton and his staff had mounted the horses which were waiting for them on the grounds, the horse of Captain John H. on, assistant surgeon, ran away. Dr. Hudfleston kept his seat, but was unable to control the nimal, which dashed through the thickest part of he crowd, ran wildly across the field, and beyond it to Broadway and then dashed up the steep embankent on the other side of the street, tearing down art of a ginger-pop stand in its flight, and stopping aly when the thick woods into which he had car-Fied his rider and the efforts of Mounted Officer Beaufrere made further progress impossible. Cap-tain Huddleston was unburt, and mounted another horse and foined his fellow members of the staff. Bugler Walter T. Hayes mounted the runaway, who solted again as soon as he felt the weight of the rider, and came dangerously near running down members of the Third Company who were manoeuvring near by. Hayes clung to his mount, however, and brought him back after a mile run. THE COMPANY DRILL.

mean time the company drills were going on all over the field, and rifle shots, singly and in volleys, could be heard, and the smoke from them could be seen in all directions. At 12:15 p. m. recall was sounded and the men marched to the south end of the grounds, stacked arms, unslung their knapsacks and made a determined attack on the rations. While the company drills were in progress, General Louis Fitzgerald arrived on grounds, accompanied by the following members his staff: Major Paul Dana, Major Auguste P Montant, Major Henry S. Van Duzer, Major Avery D. Andrews, Captain Emlen Roosevelt and Cap-Smith. Sergeant Sampson was in command of the color guard, which was detailed the Signal Corps.

THE REAL WORK OF THE DAY.

People came by train, by carriages and on foot, and thousands came on bloycles. When the two The catch-penny man, of course, was circulating in the throng. Children pointed proudly to papa much better the tactics were in the days when they belonged to the 7th, while out on the open field the two battalions were drilling, one in close and the other in extended order.

Many of the spectators were disappointed because o discharge 40,000 rounds of blank ammunition at was the first to advance on the enemy. He was somewhere near Vault Hill, and toward that point the battalion moved carefully and cautiously. Squad followed squad. Company reinforced company, the reserve and the hospital corps always remaining at a safe distance, until the whole force was assembled, when a rapid fire took place, which must have sadily depleted the ranks of the enemy. But Major Abrams was not satisfied. With yells like those of a band of Apaches, the men charged on what was left of the enemy and routed them. The same drill, only performed toward the spectators, was then executed by Major Conover's battation. The movements of this battalion were nearer to the spectators and were watched with the keenest interest.

THE PARADE AND REVIEW.

were instructive and well executed, but the parade and review were the features of the day. At 4 p. m. General Fitzgerald and his staff rode on to the field. The regiment formed in regimental line, fac-

General Fitzgerald and his staff rode on to the field. The regiment formed in regimental line, facing west, the line extending nearly across the field from the hill to the house. It took the band twelve minutes to make the tour, and during that time the column stood as firm as though every man had been of iron. It was too much of a strain for one man in Captain Lydecker's company, who fainted. When General Fitzgerald and his staff, accompanied by Colonel Appleton and his staff, made the tour of the line the firmness and the magnificent bearing of the men was the subject of comment among the military visitors. The band played the "Star-spangled Banner" at the end of the parade.

The regiment then passed in review in columns of companies, and men who have seen the regiment parade for years and who know when a review is well executed, said that they never say the 7th Regiment appear to better advantage. The following field and staff officers were present: Lieutenant-Colonel William H. Kipp, Majors James C. Abrams and Augustus W. Conover, Regimental Adjutants Lieutenants John H. Townsend and DeW. C. Falls, quartermasters, Captain Walter G. Schuyler, Lieutenants John H. Townsend and DeW. C. Falls, quartermasters, Captain Walter G. Schuyler, Lieutenants John H. Townsend and DeW. C. Falls, quartermasters, Captain Palmer and Lieutery and Carnochan; surgeons, Major Paniel M. Stims in and Captains C. J. Collis and John H. Huddleston, When the volley firing began a spirited team of horses attached to a carriage in which were scated Miss Tatam, Miss Major and two children, all from New-Rochelle, became unmanageable and dashed over the embankment. The carriage was damaged, but the occupants escaped uninjured. The horses were caught by Officers Berpehu and Henaran. The police force of forty men was in charge of Sergean Engliand.

The regiment returned to the city by a special train at 5 o'clock, and marched from the Grand Central Station to the armory. In the evening the officers entertained General Fitzgeraid and his staff and other visitors at dinner at the New Amsterdam

POLITICAL NOTES.

It is reported that Mr. Fassett has been telling people that unless Mr. Platt is placated McKinley may lose the State. This report has evidently reached Buffalo, for the plain-spoken "Express," of that city, informs Mr. Fassett that if he wants the Vice-Presidential nomination "he is taking the wrong tack to get it. Thomas C. Platt," it adds, "is not dispensing Vice-Presidencies this year."

Mr. Brookfield's declaration that he will vote for McKinley on the first ballot leads one of his friends in the western part of the State to say that the exchairman of the State Committee has evidently thed of the task of trying to be a "pro-Morton and anti-Platt man at the same time."

Unquestionably the sentiment in favor of Mr Reed's nomination for Vice-President is growing stronger and stronger in this State, to which, it is generally conceded, Vice-Presidents naturally beong. Even among the men who have aspirations for the place, the dominant feeling is in favor of the Speaker, and the conviction is growing that he will Speaker, and the conviction is growing that he will accept it. "Mr. Reed," says "The Buffalo Express," in summing up the situation, "will not be asked to take the Vice-Presidency at the hands of the successful rival for the Presidency, but at the hands of the Republican masses, whose desire that he should be nominated for second place is hardly less pronunced than their desire that McKinley should have first place. When he realizes this Thomas B. Reed will not refuse to perform the service that the people ask of him."

To the local Tammany organ's recent remark that 'every politician in the United States must look with admiration on Morton and Platt," "The Troy Press" rejoins: "Not one does, however. Politicians waste no time in admiringly gazing at dead ducks."

Why Lieutenant-Governor Saxton is not able to arouse the anti-Platt sentiment in behalf of his candidacy for Governor is pointed out by "The Watertown Times." "If the people," says that paper, "have any doubts about this, Mr. Saxton is himself to blame for it. They elected him Lieuenant-Governor on the strength of the character shown in his declaration that he would call the roll In that election they intrusted to him certain re-In that election they intrusted to him certain responsibilities, among them the naming of Senate committees. Instead of accepting the responsibility he surrendered it, he allowed his committees to be named by one who had not been elected by the people to perform that duty; he handed over to an unofficial private citizen, who had not been chosen, the duty the people devolved upon him. If he were chosen Governor, would he take the same course and hand over the prerogatives of his office to other hands? In other words, would he he Governor in acts as well as title—be Governor every day in the week, and not occasionally when he became angry about something?"

It is about time, "The Rome Sentinel" thinks, for Mr. Platt to issue another manifesto. This time, suggests, he ought to attack Mr. Quay's figures re-garding McKinley's nomination.

Mr. Platt expected to be the most conspicuous figure in the St. Louis Convention, and believed he would be able to seat or unseat delegates as he This expectation he will scarcely realize and his scheme to oust the New-York County delegates unfriendly to him will fail. As "The Buffal Commercial" puts it, "the St. Louis Convention wisee that justice, not Platt-Lauterbach absolution settles these cases, as well as others in which the seats of Platt delegates will be contested."

people of his State want McKinley, because they hink that McKinley's election means 30 cents bushel for potatoes, instead of 10 cents. "They wan him," aids the Colonel, "because they think the cause of the hard times is the absence of a pro-tective tariff."

Referring to Colonel Fred Grant as a candidate for the Vice-Presidency, "The Binghamton Repub-lican" observes that "it would not be a had nomination. Colonel Grant," it adds, "Is not his father, but he bears his father's name, and will be aided somewhat with the masses by the great reputation of his father." "The Republican" is Mr. Platt's organ in Broome County.

chine in Syracuse is denounced as a farce by "The Post," of that city. It seems to have been modelled on the lines of the fraudulent Lauterbach "but one person applied for enrolment, and ber that applied in are district was only twenty nine. Well-known Republicans like Alderman Grif fin were refused enrolment because they had voted for a Municipal Reform candidate at the last eletion. In some cases the names of anti-machine Re-

Mr. Platt's latest crumb of comfort to his fright ened followers is assurance that McKinley is not so angry at him after all, and that, through the aid of Quay and Clarkson and the other horses who did their best to defeat the will of the people, McKinley will place the National canvass hands and throw overboard the men who have found the battle in New-York. The fact that old battle-scarred warriors like "Lou". Payn can per-mane themselves to believe such nonsense shows the degree of demoralization that prevails in the Platt camp.

It is the opinion of "The Poughkeepsie Star" that "Platt stands no chance whatever of dictating the nominees of the Republican party this year. in the cold entirely. Certainly Major McKinley could not consent to unite his forces with the New-York boss after the attacks Mr. Platt has made on him. Were he to do so, there are thousands who would, in a measure, lose faith in McKinley himself Mr. Platt's attacks have been so bitter and have been carried to such extremes that Major McKinley cannot afford to overlook them. The day has gone by for the New-York boss to hunt for cover. The only safe way is to leave him outside the breastworks and give him a chance to cool off."

MR. PLATT DENIES IT.

truth in the report that he had invited all the members of the Republican National Committee members of the Republican National Committee opposed to Major McKinley to meet him (Platt) in St. Louis early next week. Mr. Platt said that he should not start for St. Louis until next Thursday evening, twenty-four hours after the time set for the meeting of the committee, which was to take place on Wednesday.

Depew, Charles H. Mur-ray, Edward Lauterbach and Abraham Gruber.
